William Stoddard, who was taken out to the post house a few days since from the Albany house, on Tenth street, died at 6 o'clock yesterday. He has relatives living in the east, who have been telegraphed as to the disposition of his remains. He has been in the city but a short time.

Mr. Charles J. Ryan, who is now taking the school census of the city, takes the cake. He is like the Pirate of Penzance, a slave to duty, and during the fight on the river bottom Wednesday stopped this Bix reporter, in the midst of flying stories and clubs, to take the names and ages of his children. He is a good one.

A detachment of fifty-one recruits from Jefferson barracks, St. Louis, arrived in the city Thursday. Thirteen stopped at this point, being destined for Fort Niobrara, and went to Sidney and twenty-eight to Laramie. All are for the Fifth cavalry. Lieut. Waite was in charge.

Ex-Gov. Leland Stanford, wife and party, passed through the city yesterday in the directors' car of the Central Pacific, en route to San Francisco. Mr. Howard Conroy, of this city, who is an old employe of the C. P., under Gov. Stanford, met the distinguished visitor at the train and enjoyed a talk with him.

A gentleman who came in on the C. & N. Q. train Thursday reports that a man named Harris forged a note on Miss Ida Mason and others at Red Oak, Iowa, Wednesday and sold it to a broker named Thos. Griffith, receiving $140, in a check which he afterward cashed at Nick Yager's wholesale liquor house. He left town on No. 5 Thursday morning but was arrested at Pacific Junction by Special Detective Newton H. ...

WHO IS TO BLAME? Barney Propounds a Conundrum to Dr. Miller.

The ecclesiastical autocrat and gold worshiper, Dr. Miller, has turned his crank and wants the officials to dance to his music, as he has to dance to the music when his masters turn the crank. He must understand that the workmen never intended violence and do not now intend any, but it was just such hot-headed fellows as he himself is that caused what little trouble there was, and just such fools as he is are apt to cause trouble wherever they are. Now a word to the wise. The supreme courts of one-half of the northwestern states have but recently decided that the several city councils and legislative bodies have not the power to grant and give streets and public highways to railroad companies, but the people are the sovereigns, and for this purpose are the highways made. What right has Dr. Miller or any one else to say a parade may not pass a given point on a given street?

ITS GOING UP.

Another Magnificent Hotel to be Built This Year.

It Will Cost $250,000 and be Erected on the Corner of Farnam and Tenth Streets.

The third magnificent hotel, which has long been talked about, is at last a reality, in prospect at least, and the plans and specifications are now in the creighton hands in this city, where the gentleman who is to construct the hotel, Mr. John Hamlin, of Nebraska City, is stopping. Mr. Hamlin represents the Finley estate, in Pennsylvania, and long ago conceived the idea of a hotel in Omaha, which should eclipse all other structures, and which should be a paying investment for a large amount of money.

The location determined upon is one which has no superior in the city as regards convenience to the depots and to business at the same time.

This location is the southeast corner of Farnam and Tenth streets, extending 134 feet on the Farnam street side and 132 feet on the Tenth street side. The building will be of stone and brick, five stories high, with basement, and will cost $250,000. It is to be begun April 30, and will be completed and opened January 1, 1883. The title to the land was cleared up yesterday through the payment of $2,000 to certain parties, by the representatives of the Lowe estate, from whom the purchase is made by Mr. Hamlin, and an agreement made to have the place cleared of all buildings by the first of next month.

It is only necessary to state that the architect is J. M. McEllatriek, of Indianapolis, who designed and superintended the construction of Boyd's opera house, to assure an imposing and beautiful structure. Mr. McEllatriek arrived in the city two days ago, but the plans of the hotel were not shown last evening. There will be 250 sleeping rooms, which will be arranged in the center of the building, 85x74 feet and 31 feet high. This rotunda will be reached by two entrances, of which the main one on Farnam street will be 30 feet wide and that on Tenth street 20 feet in width. This rotunda will be occupied by the office. It will be lighted by heavy plate glass above and handsome tiled. Leading from the rotunda will be the entrances to the reading room, lavatory, barber shop, check room, beside four sample rooms, each 17x22 feet. The billiard and bar rooms will be down stairs but the height of the basement will remove any inconvenience from lack of light or spaciousness. A ladies entrance will lead from Farnam street, east of the main entrance, and be ten feet wide. The ladies reception room will be on the second floor, to which a broad pair of stairs will lead. In the rear of the ladies entrance the passenger and baggage elevators will be located, running from the basement to the fifth story and operated by steam. The kitchen will be located on the second floor, with the laundry in the basement beneath. An elevator will connect these useful portions of the hotel.

From the two main entrances grand stairways will lead to the second floor. On this floor will be the parlors, dining room, kitchen, pastry kitchen, storeroom, ordinary, etc. There will be four parlors. They will be located on the corner of Farnam and Tenth streets, and connected with each other by folding doors. Their aggregate size will be 92x25 feet. A bay window will be constructed from each parlor. All will be elegantly finished and furnished, and provided with two pianos. The dining room will be the largest and perhaps the most fully finished apartment in the hotel. It will be 20 feet high, and 44x44 feet in size. Its location will be directly over the reading room and will be reached by a broad passage way connecting with both grand stair cases. The finishing will be in black walnut and cherry. Broad plate glass windows will admit the light, while above each window will be a large pane of stained glass. Handsome mirrors will be placed in various portions of the room.

The kitchen will be reached from the dining room by a passage way six feet wide. The kitchen will be 20x42 feet, and adjoining it will be the pastry kitchen, 24x25 feet, while connected with this will be two other kitchens, pantry, storeroom and other apartments. Another passage way from the dining room will lead into the main ordinary, 25x31 feet. There will also be ten parlor sleeping rooms on this floor, each of which will be provided with a bath room, water closet and a stove for the bed.

The third, fourth and fifth stories will be devoted exclusively to sleeping rooms. All of the rooms will be provided with large windows and blinds. All of the modern improvements will be provided and the general style of furnishing the parlors will be far ahead of anything of the kind in the west. The hotel will be run by Henry Brown, of Nebraska City, who has had twenty years experience in the business. Mr. Brown will be ably assisted by his son, who is now associated with him.

Army Orders. The following special orders were issued yesterday from the headquarters of the department of the Platte:

Leave of absence for five days is granted Captain Wm. A. Elderkin, commissary of subsistence, United States army.

The leave of absence for seven days granted First Lieutenant Wm. B. Pease, Ninth Infantry, by the commanding officer Fort Sidney, Neb., is extended twenty-three days, with permission to apply to headquarters military division of the Missouri for an extension of ten days.

Acting Assistant Surgeon G. W. Toward, United States army, now on duty at Fort Niobrara, Neb., will report to this city not later than April 1, 1882, for annulment of contract at his own request.

"ROUGH ON RATS." The thief, thief, found at last. Ask drugist and "Rough on Rats." It clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed bugs; 15 boxes.

LAW AND ORDER.

A Card from the President of the Laborers' Protective Union.

OMAHA, March 10.

To the Editor of This Bee: Sir—In this morning's Herald appears an editorial tending to bring odium on my reputation, both as a man and a citizen. Dr. Miller says that responsible citizens of Council Bluffs inform him that I am well-known there, and so well-known in my true character that when I appeared there on Monday (election day) I received an intimation that it would be a healthy proceeding for me to leave that city; and that I had abundant reasons for knowing what that meant, and that within the next hour I reappeared in Omaha to organize riot and murder in this city. It is surprising to me that the editor of the only religious journal in Nebraska could so far forget himself as to publish in his sanctimonious paper such a pack of monstrous falsehoods. True, I have the honor to have once been a citizen of Council Bluffs. I lived there for about four years, and in that time I defy any responsible citizen to say that I have been anything but an honorable citizen and an advocate of law and order. Dr. Miller, bring on your responsible citizens of Council Bluffs and prove that I am a worthless vagabond and a leader in riots and mobs. Prove, if you can, by the responsible citizens of Omaha that have known me for years, that I am not an advocate of mobocracy. All of my speeches, advice, and acts have always been on the side of law and order. How different has my conduct been to that of the editor of that slimy sheet who, in 1876, called on the democracy of the county to overthrow our government and plunge the country in civil strife, in order that the divinity he worships (Samuel J. Tilden) might be made president, and that the position for which he would sell his soul, and the souls of all the citizens of Nebraska might be given him (a cabinet office) I was in Council Bluffs on Monday, but it was never intimated that it would be beneficial for me to leave. I was there from Sunday afternoon till Tuesday afternoon, and I circulated quite freely around the city all that time and got the well wishes of all that knew me.

Why does the Herald withhold the names of those responsible citizens of Council Bluffs who ordered me to leave the city and said that I am a rioter and a vagabond? I would like to know from Dr. Miller what would have been the state of affairs at the dump had it not been for the almost superhuman efforts of Knight, Fonda and myself in standing by the police and the mayor on that occasion. Let him point if he can to a single piece of property or a regular police officer that was injured. Is it a crime against the laws to march at the head of a body of men who are working men who are seeking by peaceable means and lawful efforts to obtain honest living wages for their labor? Is it a crime for the workmen of Omaha to peacefully parade the streets of Omaha when violating no law? Dr. Miller says that the action at the dump was premeditated, and was known to Knight and myself. I want to say to Dr. Miller that when he wrote that he knew that he was writing a monstrous lie, it was not the intention of the O. L. P. U. that there would be any trouble in passing by the dump, and that there would be any blood shed. Dr. Miller knows this, but he wants to create an excitement and cause bloodshed. But I say to Dr. Miller and to the B. & M. railroad, that there will be no violence used, no blood spilt, and they will be disappointed. In conclusion I say God speed the cause of the laboring man, and I hope that the B. & M. will see the wisdom of giving the laboring man living wages.

Ed. Walsh, Pres. O. L. P. U. of Omaha.

Last Night's Entertainment. For some time there has not been in Omaha a better variety entertainment than that given last night at Boyd's opera house by "Leavitt's Great Specialty company." This company having the advantage of being composed entirely of stars in their own particular specialty, kept the audience in a roar from eight to eleven o'clock, and the applause at some of the points made was deafening. The singing, the dancing and the acting were excellent, and the bicycle riding attracted the admiration of all. The costumes were new, bright and fresh, and the jokes were not generally the stale ones every one has heard worn out. There were some good local hints, and in the closing farce "The Two Barneys," where the whole strength of the company appeared, there were the best bits at modern slang and estheticism and affection that has lately been produced on the stage here.

FOR HIS LIFE.

The Kesters Case Secures a Jury and the Trial Proceeds Rapidly.

At the opening of the trial of Chas. Kesters for the murder of Oscar Hammer on Christmas morning, it was anticipated that it would take at least a week to get through it. The difficulty encountered in securing a jury added to this conviction but the proceedings since our last report indicate that much less than a week will be occupied in the hearing. This change first became apparent Thursday afternoon.

The first witness called in the Kesters murder trial yesterday was Charles Carey, who testified that he saw Frank Graves and Kesters go out of the saloon door together just previous to the killing, that a moment later he saw Graves standing against the half open door and that a hand and arm were thrust forward from behind Graves as though in the act of throwing, and that Hammer dropped at once to the floor, receiving an injury which caused his death almost instantly.

Emanuel Cahn testified that he was at the house of Nellie King on Capitol avenue, the night of the killing; that Kesters came there and had some conversation with George Hall, who was also at the house that evening; that Hall went away and came back again, Counsel for the state endeavored to show by this witness that upon his return he brought a message to Kesters to the effect that Hammer was dead, but did not succeed in enlisting testimony.

Miss May Hall, testified that she is now resident of Council Bluffs; that she is an inmate of Miss King's house on the night of the murder and saw Kesters there; that upon the return of Hall he stated to Kesters that "that man" was dead, using no name however.

Dr. J. H. Peabody, testified that he conducted the post-mortem examination upon the remains of Hammer; that it was his impression that the wound causing his death had been inflicted by a pair of knuckles with a knife concealed; he had afterwards thought the injury might have been caused by a blow upon the head with a clubbed pistol, the skull being fractured and a very small piece driven into and upon the membrane of the brain; he would not say that the injury could not have been inflicted by a bottle but thought in that case that the bottle would certainly be broken. A portion of the skull of the deceased, showing the fracture, was produced in evidence and the character of the injury explained by the witness.

George Hall testified that he was at the house of Nellie King on the night in question; that he saw Kesters there; that he left the house and went to Treitschke's saloon and then returned to Miss King's, but was unable to say whether or not he delivered any message to Kesters as to the result of the injury inflicted upon Hammer. This witness' recollection of the events of that night was very faint as he claimed to have been very much under the influence of liquor, which condition he stated was that of the other inmates of the house.

E. A. McClure testified that he arrested the prisoner about 5 o'clock on the morning of the killing, at his residence on Jackson street; that he said to him, "Charlie, I want you; that man you had the fuss with is dead," and that thereupon Kesters exclaimed: "My God! is that so?" and came along with him without any further remark.

Julius Treitschke testified that he was the proprietor of the saloon in question; that there was a shelf near the door where the killing occurred, upon which were placed bottles of wine which were easy of access; that the morning of the killing he found a wine bottle sitting on the lunch counter and another lying on the floor not far from the door; that his lunch table was supplied with several butcher knives, one of which he found was missing when he sold out his place a few weeks later, a portion of which time the saloon had been locked up.

Miss Nellie King testified that on the morning of December 25th defendant came to her house between 3 and 4 o'clock; that she saw a knife there—a butcher knife—but it was not in the hands of Kesters; that Frank Young had it when she saw it, and that it was thrown under her bed.

Mrs. Hammer, widow of the deceased, was present in the court room during the afternoon, accompanied by a couple of lady friends. She took a very lively interest in the proceedings, judging by the close attention she manifested, and at one time gave way to her emotions. Most of the time, however, she kept her feelings under control and will, doubtless be a regular attendant upon the remainder of the trial, which will probably not be so lengthy as has been generally supposed it would be, judging by the rapid manner in which the examination was conducted yesterday.

James Whitney, called for the defense, testified that he believed Kesters did not have a glove on at the time of the killing, as he had noticed him wiping the blood from his face just previous to that and after he had been struck by Hammer. The importance of this testimony lies in the fact that Geiselman had testified that just as the bottle was thrown he had observed some one holding on to the side of the door through which the bottle came, and that he had seen a hand covered with a dark covered glove. Homer Stull was called for the defense to substantiate the correctness of a short-hand report he had taken of the testimony at the coroner's inquest and the preliminary examination in this case, which report has been truly used by defendant's counsel during the progress of the trial. Counsel for the state objected to the testimony on the ground that the witness was also called for the defense, and the other witness stated that before the testimony was taken it was agreed that it should be used by both parties the court overruled the objection and the testimony was admitted.

Counsel for the defense stated that they had but one witness more to examine, and that as the state had taken less time than was anticipated in the introduction of testimony, they were not prepared to put that witness upon the stand at this time, and requested the court to give them until this morning, which request was granted and the court, at 9 o'clock, adjourned until this morning. The judge announced that but a short time would be given to motions this morning, after which the trial would be promptly proceeded with, and that in order to get through to-day he would hold a night session, if necessary, as it was important that the case should be given to the jury this week, if possible.

The state will probably introduce a few witnesses in rebuttal, among whom will be the Mr. Morse referred to in the testimony of Miss King. The court room yesterday was crowded during the entire day, even standing room commanding a premium. The arguments to-day will doubtless be of a very interesting character, as counsel on both sides have fully prepared themselves. The opening address will be made by Mr. Bennett for the state.
